CHANGING THE CONVERSATION

COME TOGETHER, COLLABORATE AND CREATE CHANGE

PRESENTATION

BY: Chef Keith Norman

"Recipe for Food Safety Success"

Honoring Senator Debbie Smith and Dr. Pete Snyder

Collaboration is key because every kitchen is a Potential ground zero for a food borne illness outbreak Or allergen Incident

Collaboration brings people (and organizations) closer together

It helps us problem-solve

Collaboration helps people learn from each other

Collaboration

Why is that Important?

this photo & you can't see my invisible illness. Many diseases are just that: INVISIBLE.

You look at

COLLABORATION IS RELATIONSHIP

COLLABORATION IS WORKING TOGETHER TOWARD A COMMON GOAL

COLLABORATION IS ATTITUDE

Collaboration is understanding that a regulators job and industries job has the same end GOAL!!!!

Chefs Don't Understand the COST!!!!

ganStreet.com

If our food safety experts can't safely eat chicken, what hope is there for you?

Provide a server of the par-server of the par-se breast of Chicken Marsala served by breast of Chicken Marsala served by the Baltimore Convention Center was likely contaminated with Clostridium perfringens (C. perfringens), a sporeforming gram-positive bacterium commonly found on raw meat and poultry.

According to the report being released today by the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, the illnesses experienced at the 2014 Food Safety Summit in Baltimore were attributed to C. perfringens The

Leadership

Regulation Awareness

"it is my responsibility to reflect on and challenge my assumptions so I can create more friendly spaces where all guests feel safe. "We must learn to be comfortable with being uncomfortable" to create change.

Keith Norman

Leaders UNDERSTANDING that real lives are affected, not just statistics!!!!

Participation

- 1. Do Something Positive
- 2. Attending forums like this
 - 3. Take decisive action
- 4. Inspect what you expect
- 5. Create the environment for change to
 - happen
 - 6. Consistent Training

In Conclusion

- There is a never ending supply of things to learn
- Leaders that create a environment for learning, can change the culture
- Leaders that teach provide a connection with workers, meet them where they are
- Leaders that are committed and consistent build trust